

Content Outline

Maddy Angstreich

11.7.18

Project Title: Pruitt-Igoe Microsite

I've chosen the Pruitt-Igoe housing project as the content for this website because I'm fascinated by urban renewal, public housing, and the complicated cultural history of St. Louis. The forest that marked where Pruitt-Igoe once stood was recently demolished in a recent attempt to erase the memory of segregation from history, so I'm excited to pay homage to its importance and create a permanent home for Pruitt-Igoe on the web.

I'd like to build a long, single page website that holds all of the content in a linear scrolling format. There are numerous images and an appropriately hefty amount of content that will enable me to compile all of the content into this single-page layout. I plan to incorporate parallax scrolling elements and some javascript animation.

My final project for Type II focuses on the importance of urban public space—specifically public housing projects in St. Louis including Pruitt-Igoe—so I'm excited to create this microsite as a companion to that book.

- Introduction
 - Top of the page; sets a somber tone
- History & Cultural Relevance
 - Large portion of the content will be found here
- Design & Construction
 - A lot of the content will be housed here as well
- Decay
- Demolition
 - Include the iconic footage
- Legacy
- Additional Info / Sources